Meeting my Role Model

There were many people who made a mark in history. With some everybody knows who they are. But then, with others, their names are rarely recognized. Out of these hundreds of incredible individuals, I would like to meet only one, Eleanor of Aquitaine.

Eleanor was the beautiful young ruler of the land in France called Aquitaine. She was described to have long, jet black hair, a naturally athletic physique, and a healthy looking tan. She was a very smart lady who believed that women shouldn't be treated like property. Some of the things that she said and did changed the way England and France would think about woman forever.

One reason I'd like to meet her is because of her accomplishments. She must have been very strong to rule Aquitaine when she was only 15. A few years after that, she started a manners school in France that children were sent to from all over to be educated. Then, until she died at age 86, she helped her son, Richard the Lionheart, and later, John I, rule England.

Another reason I'd like to meet her is her experiences. She went through an annulment before she even turned twenty, but then had to re-marry in order to avoid getting kidnapped. But, when her and her new husband, Henry II, stopped getting along. She moved back to France where she waged war on England. After losing the war, however, her husband locked her in a tower for approximately 26 years! When she was finally let out, her son, King Richard was killed in the Crusades and she had to watch her son, John I, destroy everything she created.

If there was anyone to idolize, it would be Eleanor of Aquitaine. If I were to meet her, even for a day, I would hope that I would soak up all the wisdom and knowledge she had to offer, and become more like her.

People

There can be many people in the world alive or dead. I would pick a dead person. I also would meet a guy from historical happenings. The dead guy I picked will be from the Vietnam War ~~and~~ and on the American side.

I would want to meet this person to see how their experience was during the war. During the war ~~this~~ was it bloody, gory. Did you have friends that are still alive or dead.

While in the war did you set goals for yourself or for other people. Was one of your goal was to stay fit. Was another an other goal was to not get shot down in your helicopter or airplane. Did you make a mistake on one of your goals and died. If you had the chance to go back in time so you wouldn't tie, would you.

To sum it all up I wish I had the opportunity to meet this person.
If I had another choice to pick pick
I would not choose a family member.

The one person I would like to meet is Abraham Lincoln. Why I would is because he was amazing, he made the country better, and he freed the slaves. These are the reasons why I would want to meet Abraham Lincoln. There are some more reasons too.

First, he was amazing because he really knew what to do for the country. Abraham also ~~was~~ was a nice president. He really cared for us and the United States! Plus no one will ever be as good as him for the country. He was truly a great president.

Secondly, he made the country better. He did this by caring for it, unlike today with these newer presidents. Abraham also did so many things for this country. Abe also did this by keeping his promises. Like they say honest ~~are~~ Abe. Also by being true to the people.

F Thirdly, he also freed the slaves. The last thing I think is really nice he went to war to free the slaves in the south. I thought that not every president would have done that. So this is one of the reasons why I would want to meet Abraham Lincoln.

In conclusion, these are all reasons why I would want to meet Abraham Lincoln. He was amazing, he made the country better, and he also freed the slaves! I just wish that I could really meet this remarkable man.
